

MINOR IN THEATRE ARTS

PROGRAM OVERVIEW:

The minor in Theatre Arts focuses on the instruction and practical application of skills required to produce plays: technical production, design, acting, and directing.

PERFECT FOR:

- Education majors, especially in the Humanities, would benefit by increasing their marketability for schools with a theatre program or those that want to create opportunities for students interested in theatre.
- Students who participated in theatre in high school and want to continue their engagement and education.
- Students who participate in the Community Arts program who want to learn more in a more formal context.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES:

The practice of theatre is rooted in collaboration and creative and critical thinking. It fosters empathy and improves oral and written communication skills. It strengthens self-reliance and self-esteem. It hones time-management and interpersonal skills.

These are traits and skills sought after by all employers.

Students who complete the minor will have greater understanding and appreciation of their inherent creativity. They will discover new ways to express themselves. They will learn how to be empathetic and tolerant of others.

Education majors, especially in the Humanities, would benefit by increasing their marketability for schools with a theatre program or those that want to create opportunities for students interested in theatre.

STUDENTS COMPLETING THIS MINOR WILL:

- Work collaboratively and responsibly with other theatre practitioners to create theatre according to best practices.
- Make and defend decisions about design and performance based on text, audience, and extrinsic research.
- Create work that demonstrates knowledge of theatre in theory and practice.
- Write and speak coherently about theatre as a process and product.
